From Tuesday August 14. to Saturday August 18. 1716.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the University of Dublin in Congregation assembled, at their Commencement held July 10, 1716.

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Vice-Chancellor, Provost, Doctors, Fellows and Masters of your Majesty's University and College of the holy and undivided Trinity of Queen Elizabeth near Dublin, most humbly crave Leave to approach your Royal Presence with all that Submission and hearty Profession of unfeigned Allegiance, which we chearfully acknowledge to be due to the best of Princes, and our Rightful and Lawful Sovereign: Nor can we sufficiently adore the Goodness of God, who by a most particular Providence has brought your Majesty to sit upon the Throne of your Ancestors, and defeated all the Designs of your Enemies, who by secret Treachery or open Rebellion have endeavoured to hinder or deprive you of it.

It is with all Thankfulness to God, Gratitude to your Majesty, and the utmost Satisfaction to our selves, that we consider and reflect upon your Majesty's great Clemency, as well as Justice, in the Administration of your Government; and, what is yet of greater Concern, your Piety and Affection to the Truth and Purity of Religion, as it is professed and by Law established, in that Church of which we are so happy as to be Members. May your Majesty long continue in the same Manner with Peace and Happiness to sway the Scepter of these your Dominions, and to protect and encourage that Church to which God, in his Mercy to us, has raised you up as a nursing Father.

But besides the just Sense of the many Benefits, which as Christians and Subjects we reap from your Majesty's most auspicious Reign over us, we have yet a more peculiar Acknowledgment to make, as we are a Society dedicated to Learning. It is not without your Majesty's gracious Consent and Approbation, that your Royal Son and the Heir apparent, the Hope and future Expectation of all your Dominions, has condescended, at our humble Request, to become our Head and particular Patron, thereby conferring the greatest Honour upon us that ever has been done to this Society.

In a due Sense of all these Benefits which we have already received, and through God's good Providence yet farther promise our selves from your Majesty's Favour and Goodness, we most humbly take Leave to assure your Majesty, that our Care and Zeal shall constantly be employed in promoting and encouraging, to the best of our Power, not only the Knowledge of Arts, Sciences and good Literature; but in a more especial Manner, the Principles of true Piety towards God, Loyalty and Fidelity to your Majesty and your Royal Posterity, and Peace and Unanimity amongst your Subjects of all Ranks and Degrees whatsoever. Nor shall our most ardent Prayers be ever wanting, that God would always be pleased to bless your Majesty with Victory over all your Enemies, and with the united Hearts and Affections of all your Subjects; and that after a long Enjoyment of all the Happiness of this Life, your Crown may for ever peaceably descend to your Royal Posterity.

Vienna, Aug. 8. On the 6th Instant arrived a Courier from Prince Eugene, with the following Account of a Skirmish between a Detachment of Imperial Horse, and a considerable Body of the Turkish Cavalry, which happen'd on the 2d Instant. His Highness having Intelligence that the Turks had passed the Save, ordered out 900 Horse and 500 Hussars to view them, and Count Palfi desired to be favoured with the Command of this Detachment. Being advanced near to the Defilés of Carlowitz, the Count perceived some Turkish Horse on the Hills, and sent to the Prince for a Reinforcement of Two Regiments. The Dragoons of Bareuth, and the Cuirassiers of Gondrecourt were immediately ordered to joyn him; and then he sent again to the Prince, to ask whether he should engage the Turks; but before he could have an Answer, he was surrounded by 40000 Horse: This obliged him to make his Retreat fighting, which he did in good Order, notwithstanding the great Superiority of the Enemy, who left him after a Skirmish of 4 Hours, in which the Imperialists lost about 400 Men.

At Two this Afternoon arrived Count Kevenhuller, Collonel of the Regiment of Visconti, a Volunteer attending Prince Eugene, with the News of a compleat Victory obtain'd over the Enemy's Army, viz. On the 3d the Imperial Army pass'd the Danube, and on the 4th in the Afternoon Prince Eugene marched with a Design to attack the Turks before they had Time to intrench themselves: But he met them between Peterwaradin and Carlowitz, coming to seek for the Imperialists, and offer them Battle. The Prince seeing them advance towards him, drew up in order of Battle and intrenched: The Turks did the like within 20 Paces of him. Both Armies continued in this Posture till the 5th about Six in the Morning, ing, when Prince Eugene attack'd the Turks in Front with his Infantry, while he made his Cavalry file off and attack them in both Flanks. They were ſoon broken and put to the Rout: They took ſhelter behind their Waggons, from which they were likewiſe driven; and about 2 in the Afternoon they betook themſelves to flight; abandoning their Camp with all their Tents, Artillery, Proviſions, and Baggage. Prince Eugene was in the Grand Vizier's Tent, when he diſpatched Count Kevenhuller at Midnight. His Highneſs had not then determined which way to move to make the beſt Improvement of his Victory; however, it is not doubted, that if the Bridges over the Save were (as is reported) broken by the Enemy, after they had paſſed that River, he will give a good Account of the Remains of their Army. As for the Particulars of what has already paſſed, we neither know exactly the Number of the Turkiſh Army, nor of the Loſs on both ſides. In general it is computed, that of the Imperialiſts 5 or 6000 Men were killed, and of the Turks not leſs than 30000 on the Field of Battle. General Breiner was found at the Entrance of the Grand Vizier's Tent in Chains, his Body yet warm, and it appeared by the Bruiſes on it he had been barbarouſly drubbed to Death. The young Count Palfi, Son of the General, is one of the moſt conſiderable Officers on our Side that was killed in the Battle.

The ſame Day Count Virmont had a Private Audience of Leave of the King and Queen of Pruſſia at Wuſterhauſen, and deſigns to ſet out to Morrow for Poland, whither he goes with the Character of Ambaſſadour, to interpoſe the Emperour's good Offices for appeaſing the Troubles in that Kingdom.
